

College News:

Not sure what to do with "you know who" this summer? Yes, we know it's a little early but the opportunity for our high school students to have a great summer is right here and now.

During the next few months; February through April many university's around the world open their doors to high school students for a summer college experience that can motivate even the most "sleep in" student. We have seen our students come back to school with a real sense of purpose and drive to achieve great things.

The choices are extraordinary; from weeklong basic campus life, career exploration to 5-week summer leadership camps that include college credit. The costs may vary but for those who act now many of these programs are FREE or have scholarships available.

Just as an example, the University of Arizona offers 20 such programs ranging from MedCamp: an opportunity to explore a career in Medicine or The Eller College of Business offers a week long seminar with a international accounting firm for those student with an interest in business. Both of these programs are free. But the time to apply is now! Students can ask Ms. Glenn for more information and assistance with any application procedure. The right fit for success in college takes planning -together we can make it happen for "our" kids.
